THE IRIS GARDEN

DOROTHY STONER

MERRIAM, KANSAS

1947

Each Spring is unique but they all lead to Summer. This Spring is as laggard as last Spring was early. Now, while I am preparing this price list, the apricots, daffodils and some dwarf iris are blooming three weeks late. Other dwarfs, the intermediate iris, tulips and lilacs look as if they would be two weeks late. By the time the tall bearded iris season comes on, the time schedule will be nearer to normal.

My guess, right now, is that the peak of the bloom will be about May 25th. That is usual for a late season. The peak for an early season is between May 15th and 20th. In the twenty years I have been growing iris in quantity, only two seasons have produced peak blooms before May 15th or after May 25th. Of course I usually have some iris bloom from the last of April until after Memorial Day. But the big show is usually the ten days between May 15th and 25th. If you plan to come earlier or later than those dates, check with me first.
